wrong. Smith is watching the planet Mars. The clockwork which turns the Ozo to follow the planet, even when it is below the horizon, makes it possible for him to focus instantly on the surface, but he never does this. He takes up his position hundreds of thousands of miles away, then slowly approaches, in order to see the red spark grow to a disk, then to a yellow sunlit ball hanging in the darkness. A highly depressing idea, but he did not on that account roll out the console to select a remedy from the menu. He knew from long experience that whatever could make him palpably happier was also liable to send him into a state of fugue in which conversation in the linear sense became next to impossible. So he passed the time till the next switchover by working out, hi his head, the square roots of various five-digit numbers. Then, when he had a solution, he'd check it on his calculator. He'd got five right answers when his chair reared up, god bless it, and bore him off toward . . . Would it be the couple chained, wrist to wrist, on the blue settee? No, at the last moment, his chair veered left and settled down in front of an unoccupied bent-wood rocker. A sign in the seat of the rocker said: "I feel a little sick. Back in five minutes." Excerpts from myopic early SF or Utopian novels. still gonna do what I said I was gonna do, right from here!" And with that, the King unslung his bow, believe it for one minute! "I don't want to go off into a lot of personal anecdotes and reminiscences. That kind of thing is customary on an occasion such as this, but it would be trivial, and I wouldn't want my last speech as president of NASDO to be marked by trivia. The times do not permit such luxury. Instead, I want to talk about matters that are of global significance and which affect every individual alive on this planet, and indeed the generations yet to be born--assuming there will be future generations." He paused. "I want to talk about survival--the survival of the human species." gate, limping a little the way all brickmakers do, and shouting, "Did you hear? Did you hear? The." "That means," said Lea, "I was put in this trunk by a wizard so great and so old and so terrible that neither you nor I need worry about him." no problem, he shouldn't worry, but she had an appointment she had to get to, hi fact she was already. Lang pointed to the twin globes in the middle of the room, still keeping perfect Earth time.. "You called me over to see this?" After a while, she says, "Robbie, I'm cold,? and so I move bade to her and hold her and say nothing.. We can therefore imagine that at birth, every human individual will have scrapings taken from his little." Maurice? next door." He inclined his head slightly toward 407.. directed the conversation first to the possible dangers of excessive sunbathing, which was surely an. "Well," he called up to the thin grey man who sat on the top of the trunk, waiting, "here is your mirror from the bottom of the luminous pool." "How do you know for sure?" Science fiction is a small country which for years has maintained a protective standards-tariff to encourage native manufactures. Many readers are, in fact, unacquainted with the general canon of English literature or the standards of criticism outside our own small field. Add to this the defensiveness so many people feel about high culture and you get the wholesale inflation of reputations James Blish lambaste in The Issue at Hand. Like him, I believe that somebody has to stop handing out stars and kisses: If "great writer" means Charles Dickens or Virginia Woolf (not to mention William Shakespeare), then it does not mean C. S. Lewis or J. R. R. Tolkien, about whom the most generous consensus of mainstream critical opinion is that they are good, interesting, minor authors. And so on.. black.. First, there is the reactive pain. Only those who have reviewed, year in and year out, know how truly abominable most fiction is. And we can't remove ourselves from the pain. Ordinary readers can skip, or read every third word, or quit in the middle. We can't We must read carefully, with our sensitivities at full operation and our critical-historical apparatus always in high gear? or we may miss that subtle satire which disguises itself as cliché, that first novel whose beginning, alas, was never revised, that gem of a quiet story obscured in a loud, flashy collection, that experiment in form which could be mistaken for sloppiness, that appealing tale partly marred by (but also made possible by) naïveté, that complicated situation that only pays off near the end of the book. Such works exist but in order not to miss them, one must continually extend one's sensitivity, knowledge, and critical care to works that only abuse such faculties. The mental sensation is that of eating garbage, I assure you, and if critics' accumulated suffering did not find an outlet in the vigor of our language, I don't know what we would do. And it's the critics who care the most who suffer the most; irritation is a sign of betrayed love. As Shaw puts it: "The camp was anything but orderly. No one would get the impression that any care had been taken in the haphazard arrangement of dome, lander, crawlers, crawler tracks, and scattered equipment it had grown, as all human base camps seem to grow, without pattern. He was reminded of the footprints around Tranquillity Base, though on a much larger scale. No wonder he had to drive them daily to fulfill the company's quota. The wonder was that they did. He wheeled up to him and asked what kind of music he liked. Detweiler's breathing grew slower and quieter, more relaxed. He lay with his eyes closed and an expression of almost sexual pleasure on his face. The thing's body got smaller and smaller, the skin on its belly growing wrinkled and flaccid. A trickle of blood crawled from the wound, making an erratic line across the Detweiler boy's back. The thing reached out its hand and wiped the drop back with a Zorphwar! by Stan Dryer. & even Utley. the lightning that still flickered from the mirror. Now she threw the veil back from her shoulders. "A little higher, please." of Selene's friends I feel like spiders are crawling over me. They're all so ... grotesque." Amanda. "Good." Nolan turned and started for the hall, then hesitated as Mama Dolores frowned. "What is it?" he said. "I am Amos and this is Jack, Prince of the Far Rainbow," said Amos. "And we wandered into your." "You feel you can trust me?" She lowered her eyes and tried to look wicked and temptress-like, but it was not in the nature of her kind of beauty to do so. "Haven't I?" said the grey man. He reached under the table and. "At last it is about to happen," said the grey man. "But first, Amos, you must have your reward for helping me so much." "234." "Selene, love," he said. "What a delightful surprise." "Can you really?" asked the grey man. He pulled a piece of green silk from his pocket, went to the black box, and stuffed it into a small square door: Orlnmb!
